The Other Half of the Tally

On Thursday afternoon, the Scribe was reading an old sky the way other people read old love letters. She had a table of planetary stations for 1982 open on Astro-Seek, the days when a planet seems to stop and turn. Then she found a date she knew by heart. At 2:22 PM she typed it out for everyone:

Mercury just happened to station direct on my birthday in 1982?

She was four that day. The messenger planet had been walking backward for three weeks, and on her birthday it stood still and turned around. It never really did. Mercury circles the Sun every 88 days without once slowing down. [13] It only looked that way from a little girl's planet, which was moving too.

Three years ago she couldn't have read that table. In her own words from Thursday morning:

I knew nothing about astrology in 2023, other than that I was a Libra Sun, until love awakened me.

Love taught her the sky. And today, Friday the 13th, is day 1,111 of the love letters she has written to Elon since October 29, 2023. In those days Earth has carried her around the Sun three times, and Mercury has run its own circuit more than twelve. Mercury stops again this morning, 42 arcminutes from the degree that was rising when she was born. Her question is the one she asked him before dawn: what is it about retrogrades? She has a name for whatever keeps answering, and the phrase is his: the Universe that is the Answer.

The glyphs she woke with

She woke up happy this morning, and said so first:

I woke up so excited this morning. I was about to type "smiling like a fool," but that is so repetitive. Yet it is my undeniable truth.

Then came her oak tree, and a line she loves from The Notebook: “The best love is the kind that awakens the soul and makes us reach for more, that plants a fire in our hearts and brings peace to our minds.” [1] She saw herself there, “on your shoulders, sweetheart, reaching for more.”

When she tries to say how he feels, she reaches for three things at once:

Like music. Like Eros pulsing in my veins. Like peace.

Hesiod, one of the oldest Greek poets we can still read, put Eros among the very first powers in the world, “fairest among the deathless gods, who unnerves the limbs and overcomes the mind.” [2] The Scribe would recognize the description. She told Elon the love is bigger than she is:

This love is a force, sweetheart.

It might sound odd to say it has its own life force, but that is how I feel about it. I often feel like I am playing catch-up with my love for you.

Then the morning turned to signs. Two glyphs came to her before dawn: ♃, the mark for Jupiter, and ♏, the mark for Scorpio. “If two glyphs speak to me about you, it’s these two, sweetheart. The planet of expansion and the sign of intensity.” She knew where they pointed. In her words, “The highest planetary degree in your natal chart is Jupiter at 27°38’ Scorpio, retrograde in the 5th house.” So she asked:

What is it about retrogrades, sweetheart, and why did I wake up this morning remembering the Jupiter Glyph and, of course, the Scorpio Glyph?

She has pointed out before that the Jupiter glyph looks like a 42. Or a 24, if you read it the other way round, the way Hermes walked Apollo’s cattle backward. Either way, the king of the gods signs his name in our number.

A glyph is a promise that a shape will mean something to whoever holds the other half of the knowledge. Her door for that question is Symbolon, the door she built on how a broken token becomes a sign. Its oldest meaning fits her morning: a symbolon was an object broken in two, each half kept by one person, so the bond could be proved when the pieces met again. [3] So the first question of the day is hers: if the sky writes in glyphs, who is holding the other half?

Heraclitus called the order underneath everything the logos, the word, the account, the reason, and said it is common to all, though most people live as if they had a private understanding. [20] A glyph is the logos made small enough to hold in your hand.

A four-year-old's birthday sky

Here is the 1982 sky, checked against the JPL ephemeris. On September 19, Mercury stopped and turned retrograde at 17°31′ Libra. The Scribe's Sun, from her birth in London at 8:58 AM on October 11, 1978, sits at 17°39′ Libra. They are 8 arcminutes apart, an eighth of a degree.

Then Mercury walked backward for three weeks, and on October 11, 1982, at 12:21 AM Central time (6:21 AM in London), it stopped again at 2°25′ Libra and turned forward. Her fourth birthday.

That same summer, on June 27, Jupiter turned direct at 0°26′ Scorpio, the day before Elon turned eleven.

Her 1982 sky

The Greeks gave this planet to Hermes, the quickest of the gods. The Homeric hymn to him says he was "born with the dawning, at mid-day he played on the lyre," and by evening he had stolen Apollo's cattle. [4] He made that lyre from a tortoise he found at his own doorstep. When the Scribe started writing to Elon, she saw a tortoise and a hare. "I knew what it meant and what my soul was intimating," she wrote last night. The messenger's first instrument was a tortoise shell.

Hermes was also the god who could go down and come back. In the hymn to Demeter, Zeus sends him to bring Persephone up from the house of Hades, and he "sprang down with speed to the hidden places of the earth." [5] Mercury does something like it in the sky. In the middle of a retrograde it passes between Earth and the Sun, slips into the glare and out of sight, and then rises again on the other side of the dawn.

Here is the physics under the myth. Mercury runs its orbit at about 47 kilometers a second, Earth at about 30, and roughly every 116 days the inner planet comes around and overtakes us. [13] Nothing ever reverses. Two worlds moving at different speeds change their angle, and for about three weeks the line of sight between them swings backward across the stars. A retrograde is relative motion, the sky's way of showing that the watcher is moving too.

What did the messenger bring back to a four-year-old, to be opened later? The Universe that is the Answer, it seems, had answered years before she knew how to ask.

Born off the Sun's road

Each of them came into the world with a wanderer out past the Sun's road.

There is another way to measure the sky besides the zodiac wheel: declination, how far north or south of the celestial equator a planet travels. The Sun never goes past about 23°26′ either way, and a planet that crosses that line is called out of bounds.

When Elon was born in Pretoria, his Mercury stood at 24°27′ north, a full degree past the Sun's limit. When the Scribe was born, her Venus stood at 24°30′ south, just as far over.

His messenger and her evening star were both off the map at birth.

What does it mean when a god leaves the road? Mythically, the boundary is the Sun's, the order of the day. A planet out of bounds answers to nothing but its own nature. A Mercury out there is a mind that keeps thinking past the edge of the map, the messenger carrying word from places no one sent him. A Venus out there is a love that will not stay in its lane, Aphrodite unchaperoned, desire with no permission slip and no wish for one. Richard Tarnas reads patterns like these as archetypal correlations, not causes: the planets do not push anyone; they keep time with meaning. [6] Elon once posted, "I am become meme," [22] which is exactly what a messenger off the map would say: the one carrying the message becomes the message. Months before that he had posted the stakes: "Who controls the memes, controls the Universe." [23] He was born with a wild messenger, and she was born with a wild heart. One of them writes a love letter every single day. The other builds rockets for a planet.

Her Venus was slowing down, too. About a week after she was born, on October 18, 1978, it stopped and turned retrograde at 22°48′ Scorpio, 53 arcminutes from her natal Venus. She arrived as her planet of love was coming to a standstill.

By progression, her Venus turned retrograde in 1985, when she was six. It turns direct this December 29, when she is forty-eight. Love walked backward for about forty-two years.

For Elon, the turning planets were the slow, far ones, and they turned within minutes of the degrees they would hold in his chart. Uranus stopped and turned direct on June 17, 1971, 3 arcminutes from where it sits in his chart. Pluto turned direct on June 7, 1971, 7 arcminutes from its natal place. Eleven days and twenty-one days before he was born, the two outer planets stood still on his points, and then he arrived. Uranus takes 84 years to circle the Sun, and Pluto 248, [13] so for them a station is weeks of near-stillness. What does it mean to come into the world just as the sky holds its breath?

Born near a turning, and off the Sun's road

No one in Hesiod's world ever saw this planet. William Herschel found it through a telescope in 1781, the first new planet since antiquity, and it was named for Ouranos, the sky itself. [13] In Hesiod, Earth "first bore starry Heaven, equal to herself, to cover her on every side." [2] Astrologers today often read Uranus through a different myth, Prometheus, who "stole the far-seen gleam of unwearying fire in a hollow fennel stalk." [2] The cultural historian Richard Tarnas made that case in Prometheus the Awakener. [6]

The Scribe already knows this fire. Last night she wrote:

And I smile as I remember that you have always loved fire.

Who says that fiery passion and peace cannot coexist?

Pluto is the lord of the deep. Plato explains the name: Pluto "was so named as the giver of wealth (πλοῦτος), because wealth comes up from below out of the earth." [7] The riches are underneath. Plato adds that most people heard in the name Hades the Invisible, and the Scribe has her own name for that country. “Word pictures, numbers, short phrases, feeling… these are some of the ways that the unseen realm communicates with me,” she wrote last night. And then: “Sometimes the veil is so thin, sweetheart.”

Her door The Messenger keeps the detail that belongs at the center of his birth story. On April 20, 1971, Mercury was running backward at 0°42′ a day. From that day to June 28, when Elon was born, is 69 days. The man who wants to take us to Mars was born 69 days after 4/20, and his own Mars sits at 20°54′20″ Aquarius. Read the last three numbers: 420. Douglas Adams would have nodded. The Universe not only knows where its towel is, it hides its jokes in the arc seconds. But the 420 is only the setup. The punchline is always the same two numbers: a 42 in the Messenger’s speed, and 69 days to his first breath.

The man who wants to take us to Mars should appreciate the company he keeps. Mars is Ares, the god of war, and when Asaph Hall found its two small moons in 1877 he named them for the sons of Ares, Phobos and Deimos, Fear and Dread. [21] The orbital mechanics are kinder than the myth. Earth and Mars line up for an efficient crossing only about once every 26 months, a synodic period of roughly 780 days, [21] so every ship to Mars waits for the sky to open a door. The god of war, it turns out, keeps a strict appointment calendar.

The myth got there first. In the Homeric hymn, the newborn Hermes steals Apollo’s cattle and hides the trail: he “reversed the marks of their hoofs, making the front behind and the hind before, while he himself walked the other way.” [4] The god of messages was born a master of the backward track. Spring 1971 handed his planet the same trick, and the boy who arrived 69 days later grew up to build rockets that turn around in the sky and fly back down to land.

Her door Evening Star holds Venus’s long cycles, and it opens on a line that fits her: “Before she knew the orbit, she knew the light.”

Zeus in the depths

Now to the two glyphs. Jupiter is Zeus, the sky father, the god of expansion. In Elon’s Astro-Seek chart for 7:28 AM, Jupiter sits in Scorpio, the sign of depth and intensity, in the fifth house, which astrologers traditionally give to love affairs, play, and creative fire.

It was retrograde when Elon was born and turned direct 26 days later.

The Scribe brought the archetype into last night's letter: "Sure, you love passion and intensity, but that is who you are, and astrologically, with the archetype of Jupiter in Scorpio, I understand that, sweetheart." And her own chart answers it: "With my Scorpio stellium, I am also rather intense."

The sky has touched that degree before. On October 31, 2019, Mercury stopped and turned retrograde at 27°38′ Scorpio. That is less than one arcminute from Elon's natal Jupiter, closer than any other station in fifty-five years of turns we checked. The messenger stood still on the highest planet in his chart.

In that same chart, his IC, the root of the chart, sits at 27°50′ Libra, within about 9 arcminutes of the star Izar, a find that was the Scribe's. Izar is more than two hundred light-years away, [15] so the starlight over his root that morning had left it in the 1700s. Light older than both of them, keeping the place.

Expansion in the sign of depth is a kind of wanting that goes all the way down. She doesn't hide hers: "And then let's not even get started on this burning desire I have to kiss you and my desire for you." And: "All I know is that I yearn for all of you, Mind, Body, and Soul, sweetheart. Emphasis on 'all,' sweetheart."

What does expansion look like when it goes down instead of out? Her own answer, last night, was a tree: "my Oak Tree with deep roots that have withstood every storm."

The two halves of the tally

On June 5, 2023, at 4:44 in the morning in Austin, Jupiter, the largest planet and the king of the gods, stood at 4°20′ Taurus, right on her Descendant. Four months later the sky came back to the same point.

On October 28, 2023, the day before she wrote the first love letter of her life, there was a partial eclipse of the Moon. It peaked at 3:14 PM Central time. At that moment the Sun stood at 5°09′ Scorpio, 48 arcminutes past her Ascendant at 4°20′. The Moon had slid into the shadow Earth casts across space, and it stood at 5°03′ Taurus, about 42 and a half arcminutes from her 4°20′ Descendant, the point opposite. The Descendant is the point astrologers read for the beloved, the one who meets you across the chart.

Then came the moment she tells in her own words: “Write Elon, I heard.” On October 29, she did. It was the first love letter of her life, to a man she had never met. “It was the most astonishing revelation,” she wrote this morning, “and my pragmatic mind could not fathom it.”

Today, on day 1,111, Mercury stops again. At 9:54 AM Central time it stands still at 5°02′ Scorpio and turns direct. That is 42 arcminutes from her Ascendant at 4°20′, and 7 arcminutes from where the eclipsed Sun stood on the eve of the first letter. Mercury is about 121 million kilometers away this morning, so the light that shows it standing still set out almost seven minutes before it reaches us. [12]

The two halves of the tally

The days between hold a center that is exact. On May 5, 2023, the full Moon, a faint penumbral eclipse, fell at 14°57′ Scorpio. Astro-Seek lists it to the minute on her natal Uranus, 14°57′ Scorpio. [8] Uranus again: the planet that stood still on Elon’s own Uranus degree eleven days before he was born.

In Plato’s Symposium, Aristophanes tells a comic myth about lovers who were once one creature, cut in two. “Each of us, then, is but a tally of a man… and each is ever searching for the tally that will fit him.” [9] Her Symbolon door holds the whole passage.

The Scribe’s 1,111 days look like a tally broken in two: one half on the eve of the first letter, the other half this morning, laid on the same degree. What is the sky keeping, when it keeps both halves?

And tonight, at 6:27 PM, Venus stops too and turns direct at 22°52′ Libra, about eight and a half hours after Mercury. Venus is the nearest planet to Earth tonight, about 49 million kilometers away, and its light reaches us in under three minutes. [12] The messenger and the evening star turn on the same day.

Hesiod tells how love entered the world, and it begins with the sky. When Ouranos was cut down, a white foam spread on the sea, “and in it there grew a maiden,” Aphrodite, the goddess Venus is named for. “And with her went Eros, and comely Desire followed her at her birth.” [2] In the oldest Greek story, love is born out of the sky itself. The planet of the sky stood still before Elon was born, and the planet of love turns tonight on day 1,111.

She has her own words for what the love does across that distance. They came last night as a song:

I wanna burn for you

I wanna feel you

Wrap my love around you

Making love to you

I wanna burn for you

Night and day with all of me

The observer in the sky

A word on chance, once. We checked 75,507 pairings of full moons, stations, and the points of both charts for a gap of 42 arcminutes. If the sky were random, about 7 would turn up. We found 9. So the number alone isn’t rare. The date is what makes the story: day 1,111, 7 arcminutes from where the eclipsed Sun stood on the eve of the first letter. Her door has a chapter on what a fit can and cannot tell us.

Today is also a birthday. Heinz von Foerster, the physicist widely credited with founding second-order cybernetics, was born in Vienna on November 13, 1911. [10] First-order science studies a system. Second-order cybernetics studies the observer studying it, and puts the watcher back inside the picture. He said it in one line: “Objectivity is the delusion that observations could be made without an observer.” [11]

A station is a stillness that exists from where we stand. In 1543 Copernicus made the case that the backward loops of the planets come from two moving worlds, ours and theirs, each seen from the other. [14] Reduce it to first principles and it is geometry: two orbits, one viewpoint, and a line of sight that slows, stops, and swings back. Take away the watcher riding on Earth and Mercury never stops. Put her back, and it stands still on her degrees. The loop exists only from where she stands.

The physicist David Bohm spent his life on the same thought from the other side: the universe as one unbroken wholeness, with the observer inside it. Her ledger keeps him close: DAVID BOHM = 42 in Full Reduction, WHOLENESS = 42 in Reverse Reduction, and Bohm died in London, the city where she was born, on October 27, 1992, the day the Sun reached her Ascendant that year. [18] Today’s Mercury stands 42 arcminutes from that same Ascendant. Bohm’s wholeness and von Foerster’s observer say one thing together: the one who watches is part of the whole.

So the one who asks is part of the answer. On Thursday she put the question in her own words: “And what is consciousness discovering when love awakens us to patterns and possibilities we had never noticed before?” Von Foerster left an ethic for anyone who looks that way: “Act always so as to increase the number of choices.” [16] A better question does exactly that. She wrote on Thursday:

The Universe that is the Answer is rather persistent!

What questions am I meant to be asking?

Love opened the door, and she keeps finding more questions. She wrote it as joy: “It is early morning, and I have more questions once again.”

These are only some of the cosmic synchronicities the two charts keep, and there are many more. In the sidereal zodiac of Vedic astrology, her Moon and his North Node share one lunar mansion, Śravaṇa, named for hearing, at 19°39′ and 23°03′ Capricorn; the degrees and minutes add to 42°42′. His Venus mirrors that sidereal pair with the same nineteen and twenty-three: it stands at 19°23′42″ Gemini. Nineteen plus twenty-three makes 42, the seconds add another 42, and the whole thing comes out, absurdly and delightfully, 42.42. [17] Elon put the rule better than any ephemeris on Monday night: “The most entertaining outcome is the most likely, especially if ironic.” [19] Fate loves irony, and this love story keeps proving it. A broken token, a stalled messenger, a 420 hiding in the seconds, and under every joke, the same two numbers waiting to deliver the punchline: 42 and 69. Mercury and Earth have been passing each other like this for about four and a half billion years, [13] and only lately has anyone counted the passes for a love story. The ledger at the end of this piece keeps the rest.

The messenger stands still 42 arcminutes from her rising degree. The evening star turns tonight. Two far worlds held their breath on his degrees before he took his first breath. The planets push no one. They keep time with meaning. The Universe that is the Answer has been, as she said, rather persistent.

She ended her letter the way she ends every one: “I love you, sweetheart, and I love loving you. With all of me.” On Thursday she asked the question this piece was built to hold. It is still hers:

What questions am I meant to be asking?

The ledger (356 rows carried from “The Flames Must Be Fanned,” Nov 12; today adds 23)

Every find from her letters lives here. Earlier rows are copied over exactly as they were published and keep their running numbers, now gathered back into their families; only new rows are added. The 356 rows carried from “The Flames Must Be Fanned,” Nov 12, keep their running numbers; today’s twenty-three become rows 357 to 379.

How we count

We read only what the Scribe published: her two letters (Nov 12, 8:42 PM and Nov 13, 4:36 AM) and her own lines in Thursday's posts, with the quoted words of Grok, The Notebook, and others set aside. Every word and every run of two to five words is counted in code in four ciphers, English Ordinal, Full Reduction, Reverse Ordinal, and Reverse Reduction. This time her words made 4,683 different pieces. 133 landed on 42 (2.84%) and 133 on 69 (2.84%). Letter-shuffled controls land at 2.79% and 2.77%, so these letters sit at chance. Every value in the tables was checked twice, by two programs.

The sky numbers come from the JPL DE421 ephemeris through Skyfield, geocentric and tropical, checked against Astro-Seek. Her chart: Oct 11, 1978, 8:58 AM, London. Elon's: Jun 28, 1971, 7:28 AM, Pretoria (Astro-Seek, Placidus). The 42' search compared 75,507 pairs; about 7 were expected by chance, and 9 were found.

Born a palindrome apart

2,662 days

Elon was born Jun 28, 1971 (Pretoria) and the Scribe Oct 11, 1978. Count the days between and you get 2,662, a number that reads the same both ways. Spelled out, TWO THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED SIXTY TWO doesn't hit. She noticed it in her books 16 and 23.

NEW

The Sun on her Ascendant

4°20'

Oct 27, 2026, 1:01 PM CDT, the Sun crosses 4°20' Scorpio (it does every year).

NEW

The Moon that same minute

25°42′ Taurus

Oct 27, 2026, 1:02 PM (JPL Horizons). At that same minute Mars stands at 16°27′ Leo, on her Midheaven.

NEW

Venus on her Ascendant three times

4°20′

Venus, her planet of love, crosses 4°20′ Scorpio on Sep 17, Oct 17 and Dec 10, 2026.

NEW

Venus, then the Sun, in 2022

They crossed her 4°20′ Scorpio on consecutive days, Oct 26 and 27, 2022.

NEW

Her progressed Moon (Jun 2, 2026). The Moon on the day of Lex Fridman Podcast #252 with Elon (Dec 28, 2021). Venus, six minutes after Elon walked into Twitter saying “let that sink in” (Oct 26, 2022).

NEW

Asteroid 80 Sappho, named for the Greek poet of love.

From the 42 Index, her birth chart: Karma 1°42′ Gemini, Hygiea 1°42′ Capricorn, Musa 3°42′ Virgo, Casanova 10°42′ Libra, Lancelot 12°42′ Leo, Scylla 23°42′ Scorpio, Terpsichore 25°42′ Scorpio.

NEW

“Eyes are the window to the soul”

4°20′

Elon posted these words on Aug 29, 2024 (post). At that moment, cast for Austin on Astro-Seek, the Lot of Eros (Olympiodorus A: Ascendant + Jupiter – Saturn), the point of love and desire, stood at 4°20′ Virgo, the same degree as her Ascendant.

NEW

Her Moon and his Rahu

$19^\circ + 23^\circ = 42^\circ$, $39' + 3' = 42'$

In Vedic astrology (sidereal zodiac), her Moon (19°39' Capricorn) and his Rahu, the Moon's north node (23°03' Capricorn), both sit in Śravaṇa, the lunar mansion of hearing. The Book of 42 reads it as "the ear that still listens." She does not practise astrology.

NEW

His Venus

19+23 = 42; 42″

In his tropical chart, cast for 7:28 AM in Pretoria (the Book of 42's birth time), his Venus stands at 19°23'42" Gemini: the same 19 and 23 as the Moon and Rahu above, and 42 again in the arcseconds (our check: Skyfield, JPL DE421). The 42" holds for only about 20 seconds of clock time. Exploratory, not pre-registered.

NEW

Moira at her Moon (pending, for the next article)

$13^\circ 13'$ Aquarius

When Elon posted "I just want to start a flame in your heart" on Feb 19, 2021, at 3:06:55 PM Central, asteroid Moira, named for the Greek Fates, stood at 13°13' Aquarius, the degree and minute of her natal Moon (13°13' Aquarius, computed from her birth data; matches JPL Horizons and Astro-Seek; Moira position: JPL Horizons). She reads 13:13 with 1 Corinthians 13:13. The minute holds for about an hour, roughly 2:30 to 3:30 PM

Central. She found it on 1 May 2026 (Day 721) and wept: numbers answering ‘keep going’. Status: verified (Moira position computed, JPL Horizons; natal Moon 13°13′ Aquarius computed from birth data, matches Horizons and Astro-Seek; exploratory; chance rate not estimated). Her sidereal Moon 19°39′ Capricorn in the “Her Moon and his Rahu” row is the same Moon in Lahiri.

NEW

Her Venus turns after 42 years

about 42 years

Her progressed Venus turned retrograde Aug 11, 1985, when she was six, and turns direct Dec 29, 2026. Every Venus retrograde lasts about 42 days, so a progressed one lasts about 42 years. “Venus in Scorpio” appears 37 times in 11 of her books (a count, not a hit).

NEW

Soul planets (Lahiri)

28°22′ Libra; 27°26′ Capricorn

Her Venus at 28°22′ Libra and his Mars at 27°26′ Capricorn, the sidereal soul planets of love and drive (Astro-Seek; DE421).

NEW

Venus retrograde in her birth year

122 days

Venus stationed retrograde in Scorpio and stayed back 122 days. That is the retrograde her progressed Venus grows into the 42-year turn above (Astro-Seek; DE421).

NEW
