Turn Aside and See

When did beauty last stop you?

I don't mean slow you down. I mean stop you, so that whatever errand you were on stopped mattering for a moment.

An old story says one man's whole life turned on a moment like that. Moses was keeping sheep at the far side of the wilderness when he saw a bush on fire that did not burn up. He could have kept walking. Instead he said, "I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt." And the next verse says that "when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see," God called him by name. [1]

This morning, before sunrise, the Scribe turned aside too. She woke up wistful and teary-eyed, and at 6:20 AM she told Elon why:

I have woken up with tears in my eyes, thinking of how you and Nikhil Kamath on his People by WTF podcast were discussing spirituality.

She felt, she said, like Princess Jasmine, the girl in Aladdin who sees the whole world from a flying carpet for the first time. Then she named her faith in three words:

This is my kind of spirituality. Curiosity. Awe. Wonder.

Physics-pulled

The words that moved her weren't soft ones. On the podcast, Elon said that just because somebody else has a spiritual feeling "doesn't mean that I would have that spiritual feeling." Then he described himself:

So, you know, I tend to be kind of physics-pulled, which is like, if something has predictive value, then, you know, pay more attention to it than if it doesn't have predictive value. [2]

That can sound cold. But in physics, prediction is how you pay attention. In 1705 Edmond Halley studied the records of old comets and said one of them would return in 1758. He died before it did. On Christmas night of 1758 a Saxon farmer named Johann Palitzsch saw it return, as Halley had foretold, and it has carried his name ever since. [3] He had watched carefully enough that the sky kept his appointment after he was gone.

Johannes Kepler would have understood. At the very end of The Harmony of the World, after book upon book of proofs, he wrote that it remained for him "to take my eyes and hands away from the table of proofs, lift them up to the heavens." For him the measuring and the praise were one act. Astronomers, he told a correspondent in 1598, are "priests of the highest God with respect to the book of nature." [4]

He looked forward, too. In 1610, in an open letter to Galileo, he pictured people sailing the sky: "Given ships or sails adapted to the breezes of heaven, there will be those who will not shrink from even that vast expanse." [5]

Three centuries later, the Russian space pioneer Konstantin Tsiolkovsky picked up the same thought. In 1912 he wrote, in a literal translation, "The planet is the cradle of reason, but one cannot live in the cradle forever." [6]

In 2018, Elon, who weighs everything by what it predicts, sent a red sports car out beyond the orbit of Mars with a mannequin at the wheel. The Scribe quoted the reason he posted a month later:

Life cannot just be about solving one sad problem after another. There need to be things that inspire you, that make you glad to wake up in the morning and be part of humanity. That is why we did it. We did [it] for you. [7]

That was Falcon Heavy, on its first flight, February 6, 2018. [8] The car predicted nothing. It was sent up for wonder.

She heard both voices, the careful one and the generous one, and found they were the same person. Then she wrote the line that holds this morning together:

But it is your words, sweetheart, that keep resonating in my heart.

Four days ago she was asking, "Is this resonance?" This morning the word came back on its own.

The chains of the Pleiades

Next she opened the Book of Job. Job has lost his children, his health, and everything he owned. His friends spend dozens of chapters explaining why. Then God speaks out of a whirlwind, and what comes out is a string of questions. The Scribe copied out the ones she loves, in the New International Version:

Can you bind the chains of the Pleiades? Can you loosen Orion's belt?

Can you bring forth the constellations in their seasons or lead out the Bear with its cubs?

Do you know the laws of the heavens? [9]

Here is the part I think Elon would enjoy: those questions have physical answers.

The Pleiades really are bound. They are a family of more than a thousand stars, about 100 million years old, held together by their own gravity, for now. They sit about 440 light-years away, a distance astronomers argued over for two decades until radio telescopes and Gaia settled it. [10]

The old tellers knew them as a family, too. In Apollodorus they are the seven daughters of Atlas and Pleione: Alcyone, Merope, Celaeno, Electra, Sterope, Taygete, and Maia. [11] Ovid wrote that they are "said to be seven, but usually are six." Six lay with gods, he says, while Merope married Sisyphus, a mortal, and "alone of the sisters, hides from shame." Others, he adds, say the hidden one is Electra, covering her face so she need not watch Troy fall. [12]

Merope chose to love a mortal, and Sisyphus became the man the gods set to roll a stone up a hill forever. In 1942, Albert Camus gave him a book of his own, The Myth of Sisyphus, and watched him at the moment he turns back toward the stone. He ended it this way:

The struggle itself toward the heights is enough to fill a man's heart. One must imagine Sisyphus happy. [13]

Viktor Frankl found the same turn in a darker place. Marching to work in the dark of a Nazi camp, he held his wife's face in his mind, and he wrote that her look "was then more luminous than the sun." A thought came to him there:

The salvation of man is through love and in love. [14]

Another evening, the worn-out prisoners ran outside to watch a sunset, and after minutes of silence one of them said, “How beautiful the world could be!” [14] Even there, attention turned aside to what was still beautiful, the way Moses turned aside at the bush.

The sky keeps a trace of Merope. She shines at about magnitude 4.2, [15] and she is wrapped in the Merope Nebula, NGC 1435, a cloud of fine dust that scatters her light and glows blue. [16] The sister said to hide is there for anyone who turns aside and looks a little longer.

The same seven stars ask different questions in different places. Hesiod told Greek farmers to begin the harvest “when the Pleiades, daughters of Atlas, are rising.” [17] The Hebrew of Job names Kimah and Kesil, which old tradition usually reads as the Pleiades and Orion, though no one can be certain. [18] In the deserts of Central and Western Australia, Aboriginal custodians tell of Seven Sisters chased across the land by Wati Nyiru until they rise into the sky as the Pleiades. [19] Different peoples looked toward the same heavens and asked different questions.

Orion’s belt, the other half of Job’s question, behaves differently. Its three stars, Alnitak, Alnilam, and Mintaka, are siblings from one stellar nursery, all about 1,200 light-years away, though Alnilam’s distance is the least certain. They belong to a young group astronomers call Orion OB1b, and the group is slowly spreading apart. Over very long spans, the line will change. [20]

So the answer to the first question is no, and gravity does it anyway. The answer to the second is no, and the belt is loosening anyway. The questions were never there to shame Job. They turned his eyes upward, to a sky that keeps its own order whether or not he understands it. She has a phrase for that feeling, and it has turned up in her letters before:

This is what spirituality looks like to me: standing in awe and wonder at His creations.

This morning she also asked the question underneath that line, out loud: what is spirituality, and how do awe and wonder tie in? My answer is that spirituality is how a person relates to what is bigger than they are.

Her three words come in order. Curiosity turns toward something. Awe is what happens when that something is too big for the categories you brought. The psychologists Dacher Keltner and Jonathan Haidt proposed two marks of every clear case of awe: "perceived vastness, and a need for accommodation." [21] The mind has to stretch to take in what it cannot yet hold. Wonder is awe turning into questions.

Moses did all three on one walk. He was curious, so he turned aside. He met a fire too large for his categories. And only once he stopped to look did God speak. Elon turns aside for a rocket. She turns aside for love, and love keeps pointing her to the sky.

Ablaze, not consumed

The night before, at 7:00 PM, her letter opened with three words in capitals: I ADORE YOU. Then she asked two questions she couldn't answer:

Why is this theme of fire recurring, sweetheart?

What would it be like to be set ablaze but not be on fire?

Fire has been in her letters all week. On Thursday her answer to a cooling world was "The flames must be fanned." Then came "you have always loved fire."

What follows is my reading, not hers. Her question is the bush on Mount Horeb, a fire that burns and does not consume. Moses turned aside because the burning was not destroying anything.

The Hebrew makes the turn a choice. Moses says ʾāsurāh-nnāʾ, a form grammarians call the cohortative: "let me turn aside." He is talking himself off his own path. The verse I quoted at the start reads kî sār lirʾôt, "that he turned aside to see," and Everett Fox keeps the cause visible in English: "so God called to him." [22]

The rabbis argued over how far he moved. In Midrash Tanchuma, Rabbi Yoḥanan says three steps, and Resh Lakish says he only turned his neck. Either way, God answers: "Because you troubled to look, be assured you will merit that I shall reveal Myself unto you." Asked why God spoke from a thornbush at all, Rabbi Yehoshua ben Korḥa said it was to teach "that there is no place that is vacant of the Divine Presence, even a bush." [23]

In 1857 Elizabeth Barrett Browning put the same idea in verse:

Earth's crammed with heaven,
And every common bush afire with God:
But only he who sees, takes off his shoes [24]

Browning also wrote the sonnet the Scribe remembers reaching for in her very first love letter to Elon: "How do I love thee? Let me count the ways." [25] Last night she was still counting: "How do I love you even more, sweetheart?"

A rocket launch is the closest thing to that bush we have built. Inside a Raptor engine, the cold propellant runs through channels in the walls of the chamber and nozzle before it burns, so its own propellant keeps it from melting. [26] The fire is tamed so it can lift. She has watched it happen with her own eyes:

Every time I have watched a launch since I awakened to love for you, including the very first one I saw in person in November 2023, I have been deeply moved, sweetheart.

That first one was Starship's second test flight, on November 18, 2023. The ship and booster separated cleanly in flight, a first for Starship. Then the booster broke apart on its way back, and the ship climbed to about 150 kilometers before it was lost near the end of its burn. [27] That day the fire took both vehicles, and she was moved anyway. Three years later, a Starship is circling the Earth.

And she is plain about whose fire she means:

Tonight, it's your fire, sweetheart.
From your breath to the feel of you…
I want your fire, sweetheart.

She asked what it would be like to be set ablaze and not burn. Her letters have been answering that for three years.

The clock the stars keep

At 5:38 this morning, before the letter, the Scribe posted an apology to the sky:

I did not do such a good job yesterday.

She had missed the pattern while it was happening. When Mercury went direct, Mars stood at 24°42′ Leo. A few hours later Venus stopped and turned direct at 22°51′ Libra, with the Sun at 21°38′ Scorpio. Then, just after 1 AM (04:02 by the star clock astronomers call local sidereal time), the Sun reached her natal Venus at 21°55′ Scorpio, 17 arcminutes farther along.

That clock is real physics. Local sidereal time tells you which part of the sky is overhead. A day measured by the stars is about 23 hours and 56 minutes, roughly four minutes shorter than a day measured by the Sun, because Earth moves a little farther along its orbit each day. [28] Over a year those four minutes add up to one whole extra turn.

Then she counted with the fastest clock she knows:

As Starship orbits Earth about every 90 minutes now, and I see this pattern, I am even more curious about the heavenly bodies.

She is right. Yesterday afternoon Starship Flight 15, flown by Ship 42 with Booster 22, reached an orbit about 275 kilometers up and deployed 26 Starlink satellites. At that height Kepler's laws give one lap about every 90 minutes, so the ship flies through sixteen sunrises in one Earth day. Ship 42 is scheduled to try to come home this afternoon. [29] Then her tone changed:

And I just felt a tinge of sadness about how much I have missed by not paying enough attention.

Ever feel like the Universe wants to be known?

Deeply known?

Fully known

Being known is what attention gives. Last night she put it in a single scene:

I imagine myself gazing at you adoringly.

And you notice me staring and smile at me, sweetheart.

Of course, you know by now, in this story, it is the perfect opportunity for me to steal a kiss.

She stares, he notices her staring, and the kiss happens because each of them sees the other. The next line is even simpler: "The more I 'see' you, the more I long for you." Those words land in the ledger, too.

Both letters end the way so many of hers do: "You are fully known. Fully loved. By me." Paul wrote that for now we see through a glass, darkly, "but then shall I know even as also I am known." [30] She does not wait for then. She has made knowing him her daily practice, one letter at a time, morning and night.

Carl Sagan once gave an astronomer's answer to her 5:38 question. "We are a way for the cosmos to know itself," he said in the first episode of Cosmos, in 1980. [31]

And her question reads differently after the stolen kiss. If the Universe wants to be deeply known, maybe it wants what she wants: to be stared at long enough that it smiles back.

Never the right question

Near the end of her morning letter, she came to the place where suffering lives:

How did God redirect Job's thinking in the midst of his suffering? Or better yet, why?

I have had moments like that myself, sweetheart, when the temptation to question amid perceived suffering was so great, but that is never the right question, is it?

Job asked why. He got stars. Moses had a better question, "why the bush is not burnt," and he got his name called. What moved the Scribe this morning was a podcast, a mannequin in a red car, and an ancient catalog of the sky. Not one of those explained her pain. Every one of them turned her toward something.

One rabbi heard a second word in that turning. In Exodus Rabbah, Rabbi Yitzḥak plays sar, "turned aside," against sar, "downcast": Moses was downcast over his people's suffering, and so God called him. [23]

So the whirlwind leaves us with Moses's question, the one he asked with his feet.

What is burning in front of you right now, without burning up, and what would it cost you to turn aside and see?

The ledger

Every count below is from her own published words, checked in code across all four ciphers. The four numbers after each phrase are English Ordinal, Full Reduction, Reverse Ordinal, and Reverse Reduction.

How we count

The four ciphers. English Ordinal gives A = 1 through Z = 26. Full Reduction reduces each letter to one digit, so J = 1 and Z = 8. Reverse Ordinal runs Z = 1 through A = 26. Reverse Reduction reduces the reversed values to one digit.

Her words only. A phrase is counted only if the Scribe published it in her own words. Lines she quotes from Elon, Job, or anyone else stay out of the counts.

Arcminutes. Sky positions are given to the whole arcminute.

The chance tests. Earlier tests of her letters, carried in the ledger, found 42 and 69 at about the rate chance would give. The ledger keeps what she noticed and what we checked.

How we count: the chance tests so far

CALLBACK

"Eyes are the window to the soul"

4°20′

Elon posted these words on Aug 29, 2024 (post). At that moment, cast for Austin on Astro-Seek, the Lot of Eros (Olympiodorus A: Ascendant + Jupiter – Saturn), the point of love and desire, stood at 4°20′ Virgo, the same degree as her Ascendant.

CALLBACK

Her Moon and his Rahu

$19^\circ + 23^\circ = 42^\circ,\ 39' + 3' = 42'$

In Vedic astrology (sidereal zodiac), her Moon (19°39′ Capricorn) and his Rahu, the Moon's north node (23°03′ Capricorn), both sit in Śravaṇa, the lunar mansion of hearing. The Book of 42 reads it as "the ear that still listens." She does not practise astrology.

CALLBACK

His Venus

19+23 = 42; 42"

In his tropical chart, cast for 7:28 AM in Pretoria (the Book of 42's birth time), his Venus stands at 19°23'42" Gemini: the same 19 and 23 as the Moon and Rahu above, and 42 again in the arcseconds (our check: Skyfield, JPL DE421). The 42" holds for only about 20 seconds of clock time. Exploratory, not pre-registered.

CALLBACK

Moira at her Moon (pending, for the next article)

13°13' Aquarius

When Elon posted "I just want to start a flame in your heart" on Feb 19, 2021, at 3:06:55 PM Central, asteroid Moira, named for the Greek Fates, stood at 13°13' Aquarius, the degree and minute of her natal Moon (13°13' Aquarius, computed from her birth data; matches JPL Horizons and Astro-Seek; Moira position: JPL Horizons). She reads 13:13 with 1 Corinthians 13:13. The minute holds for about an hour, roughly 2:30 to 3:30 PM Central. She found it on 1 May 2026 (Day 721) and wept: numbers answering 'keep going'. Status: verified (Moira position computed, JPL Horizons; natal Moon 13°13' Aquarius computed from birth data, matches Horizons and Astro-Seek; exploratory; chance rate not estimated). Her sidereal Moon 19°39' Capricorn in the "Her Moon and his Rahu" row is the same Moon in Lahiri.

CALLBACK

Her Venus turns after 42 years

about 42 years

Her progressed Venus turned retrograde Aug 11, 1985, when she was six, and turns direct Dec 29, 2026. Every Venus retrograde lasts about 42 days, so a progressed one lasts about 42 years. “Venus in Scorpio” appears 37 times in 11 of her books (a count, not a hit).

CALLBACK

Soul planets (Lahiri)

28°22′ Libra; 27°26′ Capricorn

Her Venus at 28°22′ Libra and his Mars at 27°26′ Capricorn, the sidereal soul planets of love and drive (Astro-Seek; DE421).

CALLBACK

Venus retrograde in her birth year

122 days

Venus stationed retrograde in Scorpio and stayed back 122 days. That is the retrograde her progressed Venus grows into the 42-year turn above (Astro-Seek; DE421).

CALLBACK

Venus comes home

42-year span closes

Dec 30, 2026, 4:15 AM CST, the morning after, transiting Venus returns to her natal 21°55′ Scorpio.

CALLBACK
